Lego builders compete at Owasso Library

The Owasso Library recently held its annual Children's Lego Competition Thursday, July 21.

Nineteen pre-registered children attended the competition, even attracting families from surrounding communities.

Amanda Mohler of Skiatook came out with her daughter Kadence Mohler, 7, and two nephews, Haidyn, 8, and Cooper Stout, 6.

"We came to the [Indian dances and storytelling], and they talked about this, so we signed up," Mohler said.

The Lego theme each year is based on the Summer Reading Program theme, which this year is, "Get Ready, Set, Read!"

"One of my nephews has been practicing for almost two weeks on what to do," Mohler said.

Each child's creation was based off their interpretation of the theme. A variety of race tracks were created, some in outer space, some underwater and others from the Old West. Man-eating sharks and skeletons made a prominent appearance in many creations as well.

All the children received a cup of candy, as well as a coupon to Chipotle, while the winners received the same prize, but also a full size candy bar and a ribbon.

The first place winner was Samuel Marshall, 10, second place was Chris Helm, 10, and third place was Kellen Rhoton, 9.
