It's a question that can perplex even the most ardent of bibliophiles: What to read next?

The Tulsa City-County Library will host a special program to help people discover books they might not have found on their own.

"Take Five" will feature five librarians from the TCCL system talking for five minutes about five books they would recommend.

The free event will be at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Hardesty Regional Library, 8316 E. 93rd St.

"The purpose of the Take Five program is to introduce our community to a wide variety of books that may pique their interest," said Cindy Hulsey, Tulsa City-County Library's adult services coordinator.

"Books will include everything from the popular to the offbeat to the scholarly and will include both fiction and nonfiction," Hulsey said.

The books discussed will relate to this summer's Adult Reading Program, which is on the theme of "Migrations."

In addition to the discussions, the event will include a book trivia contest, refreshments and prizes.

The participating librarians include Hulsey and Rosemary Powell, generalist librarian; Rebecca Howard, Broken Arrow Library manager; Sara Martinez, Nathan Hale Library manager; and Nick Abrahamson, reference/research library associate.

To enroll in the summer Adult Reading Program, go to guides.tulsalibrary.org/ASRP, to earn coupons for free treats as well as a chance to win a Kindle e-book reader.
